Ann Blankenhorn began her college career at Penn State Schuylkill. She later finished her Bachelor of Science in Nursing at Penn State Harrisburg in 1996. The spark for her passion in nursing comes from this line of work having endless opportunities and to never stop learning.

Ann started her career as a staff RN in psychiatry, then she advanced into leadership and has held Manager, Director, Senior Director as well as Chief Nursing Officer roles. Ann has leadership experience in Medical, Surgical, Psychiatry, Maternal Child and Oncology.

Currently, Ann works as the Vice President of Nursing Clinical Practice, Education and Patient Safety at Reading Hospital - Tower Health. In this role she oversees the system nursing practice education, patient safety, infection prevention and nursing informatics.

Ann is a true Penn Stater as she fully supports mentoring students for future success, she enjoys giving back to where her journey began, and her favorite time of the year is when she gets to utilize her season tickets for Penn State football.
